Engraving, 6 11/16 x 10 13/16 inches, depicts Pensacola as seen by Dominic Serres in 1743. This Dutch engraving is based on a view originally published in William Roberts and Thomas Jeffreys, An Account of the First Discovery and Natural History of Florida (1763) titled "A North View of Pensacola on the Island of Santa Rosa" and which is contained in some sets of the Scenographica Americana. In the Account (p. 11), the scene is described as "The town is defended by a small fort surrounded by stockades, the principal house is the governor's; the rest of the town is composed of small huts or cabbins, built without any order, as may be seen by the view, which was drawn by a person who resided here in 1743, and was in the service of the Havana company, and sent in a schooner laden with cargo for this place.

Appeal from Santa Rosa Circuit Court to Florida Supreme Court, June term, 1888.
The railroad, completed in April, 1883, established rates above those fixed by the Railroad Commission. The Supreme Court dismissed a lower court injunction and determined that the commissioners acted within their authority. See the extended argument by W. A. Blount, p. 428-456, which includes notes on the operation of the line and its earnings.

How I reached the Union Lines. [2nd ed.] By Wade H. Richardson.
[Milwaukee, Wis.: Meyer-Rotier Printing Co., 1905?]
48 p. front.

First published, Milwaukee Telegraph: 1896?
How I reached the Union lines, p. 7-19, includes account of the author's trip from central Alabama to the Gulf Coast, August 1863. Richardson, a Union sympathizer, first accompanied a party of salt-makers heading to St. Andrew's Bay, then escaped from Confederate cavalry at Vernon to reach a U. S. gunboat at East Pass.
My experience as a soldier, p. 20-42, continues the account after he reached Fort Barrancas, with notes on a yellow fever outbreak, the formation of the First Florida Cavalry (U.S. Volunteers), and the battle at Marianna.
Memorable event, p. 43-48, is a note of Gen. J. B. Gordon's visit to the E. B. Wolcott Post, February, 1898.

Viaud, Pierre
viii, 137 p. illus. 23 cm.
Translation of Naufrage et aventures de M. Pierre Viaud, natif de Bordeaux, capitaine de navire. English.
Originally published in 1768, the story of this French merchant, whose vessel, Le Tigre, foundered on a reef near Dog Island, fifty miles south of present-day Tallahassee, was for years considered to be fiction. The book scandalized Europe when first published for its tale of three survivors fighting starvation and the wilderness and a hint of sex. However, Fabel eventually uncovered some documentation while researching British West Florida that showed the tale was true.
This book incorporates the translation along with documentation and explanatory notes.
